

Resilience for female micro-entrepreneurs, Venezuelan refugee population and people with disabilities in Lima, Peru

Recover Better Support Fund

The Challenge

Micro-, Small and Medium-sized Enterprises (MSMEs) Were Severely Affected by the COVID-19 Pandemic: Entrepreneurs in Lima's inner-city slums, mostly operating informally, could often not adapt to the radical market changes and new regulations imposed by the pandemic. A lack of further education, as well as access to and knowledge of innovative ways of marketing and delivery resulted in closure of many businesses and substantial income loss.

Discrimination Against Women, Migrants and People with Disabilities: Women are among the most vulnerable in the Peruvian labour market, their socio-cultural reality does not consider gender equity strategies in the workplace. Besides women, also migrants and people with disabilities are further groups who already experience marginalization in multiple ways on the labor market. Through the impact of the pandemic, they are even more prone to being left behind.

The Objective

The project aims at the economic recovery of entrepreneurial women through the generation of employment opportunities. The specific objectives are to develop skills and competences to adapt to changing conditions as well as to take economic decisions on rational basis in order to earn a stable family income. The (economic) empowerment of women also leads to improved self-confidence, and knowledge of their rights.

The Target Group

The programme targets 80 women living in extreme poverty in the district of El Agustino in Lima, Peru. Among these women 30 are Venezuelan migrants and 15 have a physical disability. The lives of especially women in El Agustino are marked by multidimensional poverty which manifests itself in e.g. lack of access to adequate housing, healthcare and education as well as high rates of criminality.

The Approach

Mapping Governmental and Non-Governmental Actors: Creating synergies with other governmental and non-governmental actors (municipality of El Agustino, Parishes of the Diocese, NGOs, Universities and Technological Institutes) to be able to respond to the beneficiaries' specific request.

Enabling Active Participation in Economic Activities: The provision of rights of residence for venezuelan migrants is supported by the Diocese of Lima and the Franciscan Order and an important step towards the formalization of their small businesses.

Providing Psychological Support: The success of entrepreneurship often depends on the support of the family, especially of the partner. Experienced psychologists support the women and their partners throughout the training and mentorship phase to ensure the acceptance and to increase the self-esteem of the entrepreneurs.
